Discovering the sustainable pathways to affordable heating and cooling

AIRAH and the Innovation Hub for Affordable Heating and Cooling (i-Hub) will host its Symposium about the Integrated Design Studios (IDS) initiative next week. This free knowledge-sharing opportunity will feature three two-hour long sessions, October 25–27.

The interactive Integrated Design Studios Symposium will offer updates and insights into the current i-Hub IDS technologies and research sessions. Each of the three sessions runs from 12 noon–2pm AEDT and includes a live panel session with key industry leaders.

You can register for any or all of the Symposium sessions via Eventbrite or by clicking the button below.

DAY ONE MONDAY, OCTOBER 25	The first session explores the latest updates to the data centres, and zero carbon design from a student’s perspective. The panel will also discuss key IDS principles.
DAY TWO TUESDAY, OCTOBER 26	We’ll dive into an update from the University of Wollongong and explore the IDS aquatic and aged-care facilities. Our panel will also cover key IDS practices.
DAY THREE WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 27	The Symposium ends with a presentation from representatives from the Queensland University of Technology. We’ll hear about the Carbon Catalogue, along with the latest IDS findings and outputs. The panel will also look at the future of IDS and what’s next.
